

quently very hospitably inclined. The fact that his caste prejudices preclude him from eating with Europeans does not always prevent him offering an invitation to dinner—his idea of English hospitality. This consists in his driving his guests to a hotel and paying for dinner, while he awaits its consumption at another part of the house. It takes him little time to get used to this mode of procedure, but after awhile one sees the propriety of accepting the kindness

Romanoff Pudding.
Take a chestnut cream, having the chestnuts soaked in sugar. After this freeze incorporate half the same quantity of whipped cream. Have a two-quart pudding mold packed in salted ice, coat the interior with orange ice cream and fill the centre in separate layers; first the chestnut ice cream, then lady fingers, then chestnut ice cream, then lady fingers, and so on, until the chestnuts are used up. Turn out in four; have the top layer of cream; cover the mould. Freeze one hour and a half; turn it out on a napkin. Serve a separate sauce of vanilla ice cream flavored with kirsch, beating well with whipped cream.

Rechauffe of Fish.
Take cold boiled fish of any kind, two tablespoonfuls of butter, a cup of bread crumbs, two eggs beaten slightly, two tablespoonfuls of milk, a teaspoonful with butter, and when well melted add the bread crumbs, milk, eggs, anise-seed, nutmeg, pepper and cayenne. Stir constantly and let simmer for five minutes.

What a Clever Girl Had On.

The clever girl had black jet to cover the seams of her green skirt in front, and, indeed, as the fashion is, all the way around. She had a black silk yoke and her bodice with black jet to edge the neck and three black bands down the front and behind. She had a green straw hat with black feathers, and if she didn't sell all her manuscripts she quite deserved to do so.

Vests.

House vests for handsome dresses, and close-fitting vests for tailor-made gowns, are made of black moire silk, velvet, or moire or velvet and open at the neck. Embroidered silk over a contrasting color is also used for close-fitting vests.

G. JOULD, Committee.

"The Evening World" will please note that the Company has closed its shop at Ninety-eighth street and Third Avenue and also at One Hundred and Forty-fifth street and Eighth avenue, not caring how its workmen exist, and we, the employees, hope to have a wrong righted, as we claim that the workmen should receive the credit due them for making the coffers swell on the Manhattan "L."

The Editor:
"The Evening World" of April 9 informs me that at Board of Health has closed up Grammar

Q. Now, why doesn't that Department take the same precaution in other cases of contagious infectious disease? I have been informed that three persons (two children and an adult) were removed from the home of the street by the Department on Saturday last, and that the persons were suffering from some contagious disease, and that a dozen or more children clamored about the ambulance while these stricken ones were being placed therein, and a man, presumably the father, was so overcome by the sight of his children being taken from his arms, that he would be a good idea to go into the janitor's apartments and have a friendly chat, and be completely done up. Your paper also informs me that a man was taken from his home, and that he was the same address, and, strange to say, they are an adult and two children. Were these the same persons my informant saw being removed? Why are

Using the Streets for Storage.

To the Editor:

As a signer of public wrongs I appeal to you to know who gives permission and for what consideration to the second-hand box dealers to use the sidewalk and gutters and a portion of the street for the storage of boxes. Vestry street, between Washington and West streets. It is public crying nuisance, for from early morning till late night the sidewalk is almost impassable. Investigate and right this wrong. There is no conferring a lasting favor on pedestrians who use this street, of which back. And knowing the great interest you take in school, I would like that the following statement be printed: How is it that our public school stands at West Forty-fourth street, near Tenth avenue, which I am a member, did not display our flag, which was presented to us by one of the G. A. R. members, on the centennial celebration of our public school system, but could unfurl it to be hoisted on March 17 last? F. D. SLOUGH.

The Girls Have Gone Back on Beach.
Wall.

To the Editor:

Can you explain to me the actions of the young ladies of the present time. I have asked five girls to accompany me to the Yale-New York game, and wall have refused. I have asked them to attend to-day's game, and they have refused. Now, I think it is an outrage that our have that English—you know—sport output it.

I am an all-around athlete, and it amuses me to use the pury arturicles of supposed manhood looking at a football game with their poetic hair.
